

---

The primary determinants of disease are mainly economic and social, and therefore its remedies must also be economic and social. Medicine and politics cannot and should not be kept apart.

Geoffrey Rose, The Strategy of Preventive Medicine 1992